Designed for a large family of seven, House XL is located on the outskirts of a new residential area in the east of Slovenia. SoNo Architects' design takes its cue from the typically Slovenian architectural elements and the rolling hills and fields surrounding it.

The house consists of three, double-pitch, gable-roofed volumes: two of which are perpendicular and run parallel to one another, thereby creating a sheltered outdoor living and eating space between them. In essence, SoNo architects' design is a modern interpretation of a rural barn.
